ICAC Wellness Program

The Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) Task Force Wellness Program has been created to help support the health and wellness of our investigators. Research shows that even the most highly skilled professionals can, at times, experience negative effects from exposure to such images and crimes.

There are many things about this work that is stressful, but dealing with child sexual abuse images and cases has particularly been noted as an area of work that requires proactive measures to support the health of those who work these cases.

Free ICAC Wellness and Confidential Consultation Services

ICAC has contracted with the Kenwood Therapy Center (KTC) to provide investigators independent and confidential consultation and support services as needed from licensed professionals trained to assist in this special area.

Call or email the Kenwood Center Intake Staff with questions or concerns. You will be provided a timely and confidential response by a trained and sensitive professional. Such consultation is free and paid by ICAC. No individually identifying information will be disclosed, in order to ensure your comfort and respect your confidentiality. You can receive this confidential consultation in the most comfortable, appropriate and convenient form for you, whether via phone, email, Skype or a face-to-face meeting.

If you choose, you can also use your health insurance, as the Kenwood Therapy Center is covered by the majority of health insurance companies. Again, your identity remains confidential for the services provided by these trained and licensed professionals.

ICAC Wellness Training and Information Website

KTC will be providing training on topics such as toxic stress, compassion fatigue and wellness. KTC's website is expanding to have a specific page for the ICAC Wellness Program.

The ICAC Wellness site is currently under development, but basic information will be available on the Kenwood Center website when completed.
